NEWS OF THE MORNING.

No report on Saturday evening, and very little in the afternoon.

The letter list is unusually postponed till tomorrow. We mention it here because many will be looking for it.

We have more news from Kansas, but do not yet get advice of the expected collision between the U. S. troops and the Indians.

We conclude our friend correspondent's last letter. He has an interesting review of this process so far.

Our New York correspondent writes us in regard to the critical position to which the country has been brought by an incapable and corruption administration.

We had a brief private despatch on Saturday evening indicating that the New York Convention makes any nomination.

See our local and advertising columns for much interesting matter.

From Our New York Correspondent.

New York, June 16.

Events hurry on—and the times are big, with potents of evil—most unmercifully, most wantonly, and most wickedly set in motion by those whom the people invested with power and made their trustees for, as they credulously believed—the general good. It is to the administration of Gen. Pierce that are to be directly referred all the threatenings in our horizon—threatenings that cover our whole sky. Abroad, by an indecisive course when the circumstances required and justified decision, the dismissal of Mr.
Clement, originally a clear duty, of which the prompt performances could not have been taken by his government, has now become almost an insult; at no time an act to wound the sensitivity of the English Cabinet, after their refusal to recall him. And the time taken for this tardy act of self-ridicule is precisely that in which the recognition of the private expedition of Walker is proclaimed, and almost contempor-aneously with the so called "democratic" nomination of Mr. Buchanan for the Presidency—the same Mr. Buchanan, who, for the sake of obtaining this nomination, and being present to work and pledge and promise for it, abandoned his post as Minister of the United States in England, leaving every important question committed to his charge—settled—the same Mr. Buchanan who presided at the Ostend Conference, where after the fashion of the despots of Europe, the four American Ministers met together, and without authority from Congress or the people of the United States, ventured to issue in their name a declaration of principles (of), which the high-sounding law that "might makes right" was the basis and the pervading motive; that Mr. Buchanan who, recommended to conservative Americans as essentially conservative, upon the subject of Slavery, filibustering, of travel whether by land or water—has gone to the extremes of the most ultra Slavery propagandists, robbers of contiguous territory, and Jewels of all right in the general government to promote the general welfare by facilitating and rendering secure the intercourse of men and merchandise between the various portions of our country.

It would seem as though it was really intended by Mr. Pierce to force England to uniformly demonstrate in which France might be too willing to join her, when the tardy dismissal of Mr.
Clement was so timed as almost unavoidably to be mixed up with these other demonstrations to which reference has been made, of a character uniformly, if not insulting to, and defining the received law of nations, and the prejudiced certainly, if not the rights, of all other civilized people, on the subject of the reciprocal duties and obligations of nations.

And if abroad the horizon is threatening, what is it at home? Civil war is Kansas, actually—not only permitted, but instigated, indeed, compelled, by the Administration at Washington, which refuses protection to Freedoms and Freemen, and stands idly by to witness, where it does not by its own, like Judge Lincoln and Sheriff Donaldson, actively interfere to promote, arson, murder, and robbery. Men born to freedom and the use of arms, seeing themselves abandoned of, if not barried by, those who should be their protectors, turn and defend themselves; and then abouts of treachery go up from all the longs and all the presses of Slavery—and because freedom will not be "subdued" by such as Douglass, and Pierce, and their abettors, those resisting lawless robbers are charged with violating law, and arms that the Constitution guarantees to every man's use, are denounced as the weapons of traitors.

I know not where this disastrous conflict is to stop, unless the freemen in Congress shall at last, laying aside all other business, do vote their time and labor to the cue case of Kansas, and after hearing and examining the overwhelming testimony of the Committee of Enquiry,—alreys all doubts and difficulties, and remedy, so far as may be, the wrongs of the past—the dead, indeed, barely murdered, and the defeat of the Second Oatocrat, although it is recalled—the more fatal blow to its institutions everywhere from the circumference of such scenes as have been witnessed in Kansas, cannot be undone—by immediately admitting Kansas as a State. Possibly the Senate would denounce a such a course—certainly Mr. Pierce would vote a bill for such a purpose; but the decision for such a vote as ought to command, would arrest violence and outrage in Kansas, and the defeat of it by Executive and Slave influence combined would so thoroughly subdue and identify the Free States that no Buchanan, nor other like him, standing on so infamous a platform as that of Cincinnati, could be elected President of the United States.

Buchanan Ratification in Cleveland.
The Buchanan ratification in Cleveland was a tame, silent affair. The speakers found it to be an unpleasant job to draw the ear of Slavery in Public City. A letter was read from B. F. Hale, of Massachusetts, defending the Pro-Slavery platform adopted, and assuring the crowd, says the Leader, that Mr. Buchanan would faithfully carry out the policy of President Pierce, that the "bloody code of Kansas" ought to be enforced; even if some of its provisions were contrary to justice; even that there were occasions on which freedom of speech ought to be restrained, and that the democracy were sure of success. The letter was greeted with a few cheers, and with a great many hisses.
It effectively killed the enthusiasm of the assemblage; with the utmost difficulty that tolerably respectable applause could therefore be excited by the most frantic appeals.

Stevens' Point.—AID TO THE MILWAUKEE AND HORICON R. R.—The Stevens' Point Enterprise says that in two weeks the agent of the Milwaukee and Horicon R. R. has booked subscriptions of that place to the amount of $50,000 more. The Enterprise says that many of them of most interest are absent from town, so this sum would be increased largely. Well done, for Stevens' Point!

POPULATION OF BEAVER DAM.—The Beaver Dam Standard thinks of that thriving town must number at least 4,000 by the time it cast its late charter election.

WADY-HALLA, Feb. 20, '56.

During the five days that we were wading to get up the cataract, I made a number of trips along the river's side. While sitting and looking at a ruined temple on one of these excursions, at the distance of the breadth of a bough of the river, I might, with some propriety, use the following quotation:

"As ver as the sand is evengle's glow, So ver as the water is evengle's shade, Upon the sand's high blos.
There sat a fair Egyptian maid."

Well, she did sit there about, five minutes—but this she unclad a leather belt from her waist, hung a narrow strips of leather, five or six inches long, which was her only article of dress, and put it in a basket filled with something I could not distinguish. Placing the basket over her head, she descended the bank, and took an Egyptian skirt for the shore on which I was sitting. This skirt consists of a round pleat of wood some ten feet long, and passenger sit on it as a gentleman does, propelling it with their hands, in a half-sitting and half lying posture. The end of the skirt, which comes out of the water one foot or more, is aimed at the point of destination. She landed at a place some three or four rods south of where I was sitting, and I saw her no more. This dress is generally worn by the Nubian girls before marriage, although many of them, particularly at this season of the year, when it is much cooler than in the summer, wear over this loose shirt-like dress, made of blue cotton, which is put on and thrown off without the least inconvenience.

The inhabitants of Nubia are a distinct race from the Egyptians, or Arabs. They are full as dark as the negroes of our own country, without having any of their features or peculiarities.
The men are of medium size, with large heavy heads of black hair, and with strong muscles. They are friendly and always good-natured. When not laboring, many of them are armed with spears with steel points, having handles some ten feet long. Others have nothing but clubs. The females have beautiful features, down into which the charms brood in the mountain tops, looked with dread. Passing into the valley of the Black Sea and found ourselves in the land of the Orient. From thence to ancient Alexandria of Athens and Smyrna, and from thence passing by ruined cities and temples to the city of Ephesus, we arrived at Nicaea. In the castle of Ephesus, we made our headquarters and here I spent a week. Here we were met by the Emperor Constantine, who, in order to secure the favor of the people, visited the city in person, and the people were delighted to see him. He was received with cheers and acclamations, and the people gathered around him, and he was received with great respect and admiration. He spent a week in the city, and then returned to the land of the Orient. From thence to the land of the Persians, and then to the land of the Indians, and finally to the land of the Chinese. He was received with great respect and admiration everywhere he went, and

OUR WESTERN WOODS.
A GARDEN OF FRESH WOODS.
With the changing shades of a western sky In the recesses of a quiet shift.
Where the sun's a glow and we're Through many a leafy aisle—At the quiet notes that swell and die In the soft, low tones of a lute.
In playful beths that bring us home,
And the lingering notes of dawn's decline Through trees embowered in rich robes of lace.

The S. and H. Hall, A. & J. C. & Co.
On the shores of many a lake, Where the waters upon a pebbly strand Have a voice of their own.

W. M. and J. C. & Co.,
On many a gray hill,
At the Willow beds its spear-like leaves In the soft, flowing rill.
There's a garden of roses, a rose bush, Where twilight's a lover, a lover, Where the song of many a sweet-scented bird,
And the waving branches alone are heard.

The voice of a fairer sky May well be a garden's home, Through the ethereal vault of palest air,
And the clouds of I-amon.

W. M. and J. C. & Co.,
In the garden of blossoms—
The grand old woods of our western lands Are still far from those—
For the spirit of freedom moves, In the joyous roll the hand has toils, For it toils until results are there,
And when the toils are over, the trees are gray, A shadow of glory that's passed away.

H. H. Hall, A. & J. C. & Co.

Now we find a man who enjoys a whole world—no room for him to go, but his spirit is free, but he has some good qualities in an eminent degree.

For people to make advances to their lives, to tables, or offices of their fortune, and receive rewards. To be as good as their word is the expense and difficulty.

The man who directs the world is always dangerous—for the world can easily go on without him, and in a short time will cease to exist.

Laws are generally found to be nests of such a texture as the little creeps through, the great break through, and the middle fire are alone enough in them.

It is more deplorable never to try to spoil (in public), than to try to, and fail, as it is more disgraceful not to fight, than to fight and be beaten.
